

OTHER NAMES FOR CHANGE

Other names for change are
Transformation and Destruction.

Transformation REQUIRES destruction
Because it is the first step in transformation.

You see, Baby Love, everything in and out of Existence,
Is energy, and energy cannot be destroyed.

A forest disappears, a marble mountain vanishes,
And a majestic Cathedral rises.
Is it transformation or destruction?

Wheat is ground into flour, yeast dissolves into gas,
And bread is on the table.
Is it transformation or destruction?

A plastic straw was once a pool of oil.
Now the handicapped can drink.
Is it transformation or destruction?

An accomplished liar, thief, and murderer is struck by lightning
And has a near-death experience.
He wakes up as a crippled hell-fire and brimstone righteous minister.
Is it "transformation" or "destruction"?

An honest man with impeccable integrity makes a difficult choice
Between life and death, and finds himself a prisoner.
Is it destruction or transformation?

Any way you look at it, destruction
Is the first step in the continuing process of transformation.

All of Creation depends on destruction first, then reinventing the energy
Into more useful stuff.

Goes to show you that Ageless Wisdom nailed it with:

ALL THAT EVER WAS, OR WILL BE, IS HERE NOW.

And neglected to add, "But all is really fluid."
